

TEXTILE STRIKERS AND GUARDS CLASH

Minor Encounters Mark Quietest Day Since Lawrence Lockout Started.

800 MORE QUIT WORK

Employees of the Arlington Mill Join Movement—Relief for the Militia.

[SPECIAL DESPATCH TO THE HERALD.] LAWRENCE, Mass., Friday.—With only a few encounters between strikers and sentries on duty in various parts of the city to-day, Lawrence was quieter than since the beginning of the strike of 15,000 textile workers a week ago. There are countless rumors of dynamite plots and of coming assassinations of militia officers, but no damage has yet been done.

Several of the mills paid employees who had wages coming to them, and in the streets leading to these mills and in front of some of them millhands and strikers had disputes which ended in blows. A Pole was clubbed with the butt of a rifle when he refused to obey an order to move on and a militia lieutenant punched a Syrian striker who was fighting with a fellow countryman who had refused to join the strikers.

E. Gianni, a lieutenant of Joseph J. Ettor, leader of the strike, was arrested for threatening to kill girls who were on their way to the mills. For carrying a revolver he was fined $100 and sentenced to one year in jail.

Nearly eight hundred operatives at the Arlington Mills quit work this morning and English speaking operatives voted to endorse the strike. This affects about fourteen hundred operatives, the leaders assert.

A settlement of the strike at the Wawoon Mills, the first to be reported, was effected. The strikers there say that their demand for a fifteen per cent increase was granted and that they will return to work next Monday. The officials of the mills deny there was any increase in wages.

It is estimated that $100,000 was paid out to the strikers by the various mills. During the paying hours lines of soldiers surrounded the entrances to the mill offices and double rows of them were stationed in front of every cash office. Most of the strikers were in good humor, and after they received their pay stood about the streets in groups, laughing and talking. Although every barroom in the city was open for the first time in three days, the owners reported to-night that they did very little business.

Four companies of militia will be brought here from Salem, Lynn and Gloucester to-morrow and some of the men who have been on constant duty since Friday will be relieved. Colonel Sweetser says he will keep a force of five hundred here. In case of trouble more will be called in.

State police this afternoon arrested Michael Kubara, a striker, on a charge of having with four others threatened to kill Paul Casanovica if he returned to work in the mills.

Charles G. Wood, of the State Board of Arbitration, has been here trying to bring about a settlement of the strike, but late to-night mill owners and strikers said that neither side is willing to concede anything.

Only $100 have been voted by other labor organizations toward the strike fund so far, hence the mill owners look for either a settlement with terms dictated by them or for dynamiting and violence.

Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, one of the organizers of the Industrial Workers of the World, is expected here from New York to-morrow to lead the women strikers. Representatives of Governor Foss are also expected here to-morrow to make another effort to bring the mill men and the strikers together.

"Chance" is the name of Joseph Conrad's newest novel, written especially for the SUNDAY NEW YORK HERALD. It is a story that all women will like. First chapter to-morrow.

SAVED FROM $15,000

"HEIRESS" SWINDLE

Oregon Man Is on Board Vessel on Way to Spain When Detectives Enlighten Him.

Two persuasive policemen from Inspector Hughes' detective staff, yesterday saved Charles M. Olsen, sixty-five years old, a wealthy and keen business man of Portland, Ore., from falling a victim to the time worn Spanish letter swindle. Mr. Olsen, bound for Madrid, was nervously pacing the deck of the Bretagne, when the detectives acting upon advice from the West, induced him to abandon his trip to Spain. Later he congratulated himself on saving $15,000.

Mr. Olsen, on December 11, received a letter from "Victor Dupont," who said he was in jail in Madrid for a political offense. He said that he had managed to hide $50,000 pesos in a trunk, and that Mr. Olsen could have it if he paid $15,000 to the Spanish government, and also agreed to become the guardian of Dupont's daughter. Mr. Olsen decided to go to Spain. His son, a student in the University of Michigan, notified the New York police to detain the elderly man. Mr. Olsen agreed to hurry back to Oregon.

2 PLUNGE 130 FEET, KILLED.

One Steeplejack Slips, Drags Down Other Who Tried to Save Him.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Friday.—Two steeplejacks fell 130 feet to-day when one attempted to save his companion who had slipped from a ladder on top of the North Broad Street Presbyterian Church. When the bodies hit the ground the hand of Herman Greenwald, twenty-five years old, was still clutching the overside of August Johnson, forty-eight.

When Johnson slipped he started to slide down the steep incline. As he rushed past Greenwald, who was on the ledge, the latter grasped but was unable to check the momentum.

Turkeys Guide to Gold Field.

WINNIPEG, Friday.—Already more than six hundred gold claims have been staked at the Miltons Man gold fields, which were discovered through gold nuggets found in the crops of turkeys. George McDonald, who went into the Klondike in 1898, says it is the best find in his experience and predicts that when the snow melts the ground a rich gold bed will be uncovered.

Democracy to Rule at Princeton,' Declares Dr. John R. Hibben

New President of University Tells Gathering of Graduates at Essex County Country Club That Equality for All Is His Motto—Dr. Wilson Not Mentioned.

In his first public utterance since his elevation to the presidency of Princeton University, Dr. John R. Hibben last night announced that one of his chief aims would be to conserve the democratic spirit of the institution. "The spirit which judges a man among his fellow men always upon his own merit and never upon the consideration of any adventitious circumstances of birth or wealth." This sentiment was cheered to the echo by 150 Princeton men, mostly members of the Princeton Alumni Association of the Oranges, who gathered in the Essex County Country Club at West Orange, N. J., to do him honor.

It was one of the greatest "get together" functions that Princeton men have had in years, the keynote of the dinner being harmony and the fervent desire to unite all factions in one solid family for the glory of Old Nassau. The dinner was under the auspices of the Princeton men who live in the Oranges, but prominent members of the alumni dropped in from this city and nearby places to assure Dr. Hibben that they were with him heart and soul and were ready to go the limit to insure the success of his administration.

The new head of the university received a rousing welcome when he arrived at the club house, and every mention of his name brought out the Princeton yell with renewed vigor. None of the speakers referred to Governor Woodrow Wilson. Dr. Hibben's predecessor, Dr. Charles D. Walcott, was not touched upon, those present trying all their time to discussing the new administration. Dr. Hibben announced that there would be no changes for the present and that the organization of the university would remain as it was until the end of the academic year.

Other who spoke were Mr. Joseph N. Ewing, Class '12, who brought the greeting from the undergraduates; Mr. W. D. Moffat, Class '84, who assured Dr. Hibben of the hearty support of the alumni; and Mr. Job E. Hedges, Class '81, who was in his best form and kept his listeners in a gale of laughter for fifteen or twenty minutes; Mr. Howard McClellan, Class '84, and Mr. Parker D. Handy, Class '78.

Dr. T. W. Harvey, retiring president of the association, introduced Mr. E. D. Duffield, the toastmaster. Bishop Edward S. Lines, of New Jersey, and Chief Justice William S. Gummere, of New Jersey, were seated at the speakers' table. Some of the prominent Princeton men present were Mr. Moses Taylor Pine and Mr. Edward F. Holden, of this city; Mr. Deal McCarter, Mr. Edward H. and Mr. Gayle Young, of Newark.

Speaking of the democratic spirit in the University, Dr. Hibben called attention to the fact that in the freshman class there are one hundred and fifteen students who are living on less than $400 for the year, most of them supporting themselves wholly or in part.

"I believe this spirit is here in Princeton and it has been here from the beginning," said Dr. Hibben. "According to my very intimate knowledge of the undergraduates' disposition and sentiment during the last twenty years as I have gone in and out among them, it has seemed to me that Princeton is peculiarly the place where poverty does not count against a man nor wealth for him. I have indeed known a number of cases where a boy's wealth or rather his attempt to use his wealth in order to advance his own interests or social standing has worked out disastrously as regards his position in the esteem of his fellow men in Princeton. I would close the confession of my faith in what I believe to be the Princeton idea, to which the Princeton spirit renders its loyal allegiance and devotion—No pedantry in scholarship, no affectation in manners, no hypocrisy in morals, no dissimulation in friendship and no cant in religion."

Dr. Hibben will be the principal guest at a dinner given by the Nassau Club in Princeton to-night. On Friday night, February 23, he will be the guest of the Princeton Alumni Association of the United States at a dinner in the Waldorf Astoria.

MICHIGAN URGED TO TEACH HEALTH

Alumni at Annual Dinner Are Told That the University Will Celebrate Diamond Jubilee.

Dr. Eugene H. Porter, New York State Commissioner of Health, in an address at the annual dinner of the University of Michigan Club of New York City, at the Hotel Knickerbocker last night, urged Harry B. Hutchins, president of the university, to establish in Ann Arbor a school of sanitary science and public health. Study of methods for the control and prevention of curable diseases, he asserted, is one of the greatest problems which confronts the nation to-day.

Prevention of diseases, Dr. Porter said, is a question which both the State and the medical profession should endeavor to solve. To succeed in this undertaking, he said, the State should have greater supervision of water supplies, filtration plants, control of curable and preventable diseases, care of supervision of school children, the checking of the evils of alcohol and the prevention of insanity. He said the usefulness of the University of Michigan could be increased by the founding of a School of Sanitary Science and Public Health.

Dr. Royal S. Copeland, president of the University of Michigan Club, presided and introduced the speakers. Dr. Elmer Ellsworth Brown, chancellor of the University of New York, said the invocation. The speakers were Dr. Hutchins, president of the university; Levi Lewis Barbour, formerly regent of the university; Dr. Elmer Ellsworth Brown, chancellor of the University of New York; William Walter Wedemeyer, Representative in Congress, and Dr. Eugene H. Porter.

Announcement was made by Dr. Hutchins that the University of Michigan will this year celebrate its diamond jubilee. He spoke of the growth of the institution and said that its thirty thousand alumni have achieved fame in every State and in many foreign countries. Loyalty of the men graduated from the university, he said, has been one of the greatest factors for the welfare of the institution.

Representative Wedemeyer, who resides in Ann Arbor, eulogized Michigan's Governor, Chase Osborn, and suggested his eligibility for the republican Presidential nomination.

Blake Hillyer, president of the club, presided.

More than twelve thousand strangers arriving in New York city last year were provided with information, advice and guidance through the efforts of the Travellers' Aid Society, which was organized six years ago. The society had its agents at the railroad stations and at the steamship pier ready to offer a helping hand to the stranger.

Since beginning its work the society had assisted 37,299 persons through agents speaking forty-two languages or dialects. All the service provided by the society is free.

JOKER SENDS UNEMPLOYED TO AROUSE A BRIDEGROOM

Army of Job Seekers, Lured by Advertisement, Awakens Flushing Man at Midnight and He Calls the Police.

Gus Ramm, of Flushing, says he can assimilate a joke as readily as the next one without it leaving any scars on him and that Mark Twain was one of his favorite authors, but that when some person is deluded into thinking he is a humorist because he assembles fifteen or twenty carpenters, blacksmiths, plumbers, piano tuners and other artisans in front of his house on the night of his wedding, why that is another kettle of fish and if he can catch this person he is likely to be arrested. Mr. Ramm adds further he has strong suspicions as to the identity of the joker and that he has not made these a secret to the police.

Miss Harmin Schillerman was married to Mr. Ramm in the Bronx on Thursday night by the Rev. J. H. Rosner, and after the bride had been kissed and the rice and the old shoes had been thrown the bride and bridegroom departed for Flushing, where Mr. Ramm has a confectionery and ice cream store at No. 61 Main street. Hardly had Mr. and Mrs. Ramm arrived when there was a noise outside the house which sounded like a lot of actors discussing their salaries. According to Mr. Ramm, there hasn't been so much noise since the Battle of the Wilderness. Shortly there came a brisk ring on the door bell, which was superfluous, as the bridegroom was already on his way down stairs to see if the house was afire.

"We want the jobs," came the chorus. "What jobs?" inquired Mr. Ramm.

"The ones in the advertisement," urged one soloist as he swung a pick.

"My good men," answered Mr. Ramm, "go away from here."

"Go away?" asked one, as he menaced the bridegroom with the pick. "Not me. I had trouble enough getting here. I used up my last cent in car fare to make it."

Ramm telephoned for the police. Policemen Sallon and Gill found nearly twenty men, many well enough equipped to start work on a subway. They had brought everything but dynamite. The police drove the protesting men away.

An investigation yesterday developed that some person had inserted an advertisement in a New York newspaper and had signed Mr. Ramm's name to it, stating that there were jobs for worthy men who applied at Mr. Ramm's house

Mrs. Knoche says Rindberg asked her for work, and that she engaged him to wash windows. He took her jewel case from a bureau in her bedroom, she told the police. The police learned that a man had applied to Mrs. C. Knoche, of No. 555 West End avenue, for help and that she had told him to return this morning. The detectives concealed themselves in the house and arrested Rindberg when he appeared.
